I worked with Bob in Production Control, where he was a scheduler who had to inform the foundry what to mold in the Malleable iron foundry. I knew him also as a teenager through other friends. Bob was reliable and got along with everyone at work. I remember him being a responsible husband and father. He got off work early enough to take the boys to appointments many times. He coached sports and was very present in his sons lives in a time when many men thought things were a woman's place. He was a good guy.
